No. 311/2010

Date. 22nd November 2010

JOHN MACKINTOSH HALL LIBRARY

The Ministry for Culture is pleased to advise the general public that, thanks to a donation made earlier today by Gibtelecom, there are now four new Computers with full internet access available for use at the John Mackintosh Hall Library.

These four computers are connected to the Library's Wi-Fi Network, bringing the total number of computers available for public use up to five. The fifth computer is reserved solely for use in the Children's Library area, but is not connected to the internet.

All four new computers have USB Ports which allows files to be saved externally, for example onto pen drives, etc. Any information saved directly onto the new computers will be wiped from the hard drive every evening when these restore themselves automatically to their default settings.

Members of the public are also reminded that free internet access remains available through the use of their own Wi-Fi enabled laptops, should they so prefer, with log-in passwords obtainable from the Library's Reception Desk.
