Latest Hansard ready in record time

The new Government continues to deliver on its commitment to improve the workings of Parliament and the supply of information to the public.

Hansard, the official record of the proceedings of Parliament for Question-time on Thursday last week, is now available. This is a vast improvement when compared to what used to happen under the previous administration, where the production and availability of Hansard would often take many months.

This will be of assistance to Members of Parliament, particularly the Opposition, to the media and to the public as a whole.
