Date: 12th September 2012

INTEREST GROWS IN “THINKING GREEN” SEMINAR

Interest in October's "Thinking Green" seminar continues to grow, with over one thousand people expected to hear keynote addresses by Vice President and Nobel Peace Laureate Al Gore and Juan Verde, International Co-Director of President Barak Obama's re-election campaign.

Nearly twenty firms and organisations, both local and international, have already shown an interest in exhibiting their products and services at the trade fair which will run alongside the seminar. The trade fair will be an ideal opportunity for companies to introduce and raise awareness of their brands – especially if they are offering environmentally friendly goods or services or if they have adopted environmental and sustainable practices. Trade stands will be open throughout the day, both in the main hall and in the outer areas of the Tercentenary Hall.

The Thinking Green event will be held on Sunday 21st October.

For further information, companies interested in participating at the trade fair should contact the Department of the Environment on 20045769 or via e-mail on info.environment@gibraltar.gov.gi
