GSD's THIN SKIN BREAKS OVER NETTO

Mr Feetham and the GSD have developed an extraordinary thin skin and now seem to find that even a description of someone's speech as "boring" is somehow improper or unfair.

This is in stark contrast to the way in which they behaved in Government and continue to behave in Opposition when they call anyone who speaks out against them all sorts of nasty names. "Boring" is a much gentler remark than "incompetent", "unfit to govern" or some of the other choice names they choose to call members of the Government.

The Government makes no apology for its accurate and precise description of Mr Netto's speech, by which it stands.

Now that they are in Opposition the members of the GSD need to grow a slightly thicker skin and concentrate on things that matter and not act as victims at the first opportunity in order to try to win sympathy from a public that will not forget how vicious they were in Government!

It is to be regretted that the GSD has chosen to issue statements on a subject as irrelevant as this, leaving Government with no choice but to respond.
