Borders and Coastguard Agency Training Department Successfully Complete 'Train The Trainer' Course

Members of the Borders and Coastguard Agency's training department have recently upgraded their skills by successfully completing a two day 'Train the Trainer' course at Bleak House. The course was delivered by a UK provider of Executive Coaching, Development and Consultancy services.

The course was designed to extend skills in basic training design and delivery as well as refining training techniques. It also illustrated methods of structuring and designing training sessions thus making them more interesting, stimulating and relevant. The course also gives students greater enthusiasm and confidence and stimulates creativity.

The BCA Training Department consists of the Training Manager Andrew Victor, Training Officer Michael Baldacchino and Senior BCA Officer William Recagno, who was the recent successful candidate in a selection process for the post of Auxiliary Trainer.

Commenting on the training, the Agency's Chief Executive, Andrew Bonfante, stated that "We take part in a heavily regulated industry which requires a huge amount of training of our Officers. By training our trainers we show our commitment to maintaining a high and professional standard throughout the Agency."
